a study-group (Zirkel) or is enrolled as student in a study-group on the Classics.

- 8. A change has also taken place in the structure of the party organization within the party schools. Formerly there was only the central party directorate, with party groups as underpinning. There is probably still a central party organization with an official secretary; but in addition the students have a specially elected party leadership side by side with the party groups. The same is true of the teachers and other personnel. For instance, there is now a party secretary of the students' party directorate in the party schools. This secretary is not an official, but is a student.
- 9. During 17 June 1953 and for several weeks following, the Berlin Bezirk Party School naturally ceased to function. During this period the students were divided among the various Berlin enterprises or Kreis directorates. During 16 and 17 June, the students were sent in groups into the city to "enlighten" the population. They were specifically instructed to take off party insignia beforehand. Actually, however, little "enlightening" was done by the students because considerable fear prevailed even among the convinced members, and all were therefore very cautious. The 17th of June is said to have had its effect upon the school to the very end of the term, and no real enthusiasm and zeal for learning was left.
- 10. The instructor collective of the Berlin Bezirk Party School is made up of the following personnel: (for personalities, see the following sections of this report)
 - a. Office of the Director: director, deputy director, party secretary.
 - b. Course in Political Economy: chief instructor and two instructors.
 - c. Course in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union: chief instructor, six instructors, one assistant.
 - d. Course in Philosophy: chief instructor and three instructors.
 - e. Course in German History: chief instructor and four instructors.
 - f. Russian Language: one instructor.
 - g. Librarian: one person.
 - h. The above list is not complete. There are also a number of assistants in each course.
